What will I be learning about in this Learning Programme? In a journey through music of other cultures, we now move to Indonesia to study the traditional music of this country, Gamelan. With its complex interlocking polyphonic textures and unique sounding instruments, pupils will explore the music through listening, performance and composition.
Where have I seen this learning before? We have not studied this style before however, we have looked at percussion instruments before and most instruments of Gamelan are from this family. We have also looked at melodies on previous performance pieces.
What could I use it for? Pupils can apply their knowledge of performing melodies now in a new context of music much different to our western culture.
